(Dublin, Georgia – July 2026) The Board of Directors of the Dublin-Laurens County Chamber of Commerce has selected Jennifer Jarvis as its next President and Chief Executive Officer. Dr. O.J. Hall, chair of the chamber and superintendent of Laurens County Schools, announced the appointment.

The Chason Group led the executive search process for the chamber.

Jarvis started her new position this week. She previously served as President and CEO of the Cairo-Grady County Chamber of Commerce in Cairo, Georgia, a position she had held since 2021.

"The Board of Directors and Search Committee focused on identifying a relationship-driven leader who will strengthen connections among the chamber, the business community, and key regional partners," Hall said. "Jennifer brings those qualities and much more to the organization. Her proven ability to build partnerships and her extensive knowledge of the chamber profession were deciding factors in our selection."

Before leading the Cairo-Grady County Chamber, Jarvis served as Program Services Director for the Moultrie-Colquitt County Chamber of Commerce in South Georgia. She has also held positions with Easter Seals of Southwest Georgia and the Colquitt County Board of Education.

"I am very excited about the opportunity to serve the businesses and residents of Dublin-Laurens County," Jarvis said. "I believe my experience, energy, and commitment to community engagement will build upon the strong foundation established by those who have previously led this chamber."

The president serves as the chief executive and strategic leader of the business organization. Reporting to the Board of Directors through its annually elected chair, the president is responsible for leading the chamber's strategic direction, advocating for the business community, and strengthening partnerships that support economic vitality throughout the region.

The chamber leader also serves as a bridge builder, connecting businesses, government, education, and nonprofit organizations while overseeing chamber operations, including membership development, programming, financial management, and community engagement.

The executive search process was conducted in three phases. The first phase focused on gathering feedback from community stakeholders regarding the desired qualifications and leadership characteristics of the next president. The second phase involved a nationwide recruitment effort to identify qualified candidates. The final phase included a comprehensive evaluation process featuring written communications, in-person interviews, and candidate assessments.

In addition to Hall, members of the Search Committee included Joey Barrett of Georgia Power; Dr. Kathryn Davis of Oconee Fall Line Technical College; Marcia Dixon, interim president and CEO of the chamber; Jason Dollar of Bank of Dudley; and Brad Griffin of Fairview Park Hospital.

The chamber's top leadership position became available in January when Heath Taylor announced his resignation to accept the President and CEO position with the Columbia County Chamber of Commerce near Augusta. Taylor served the Dublin-Laurens County community for 10 years.

The chamber partnered with The Chason Group, an executive search firm specializing in chambers of commerce, economic development organizations, destination marketing organizations, and foundations, to coordinate the process.
